In Support of Countering Human Trafficking and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children

- Commissioner Emily M. Murase, Ph.D. and Student Delegates Teresia Chen and Miguel Tantiado

WHEREAS: According to both the federal Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 (reauthorized in 2013) and the 2012 Californians Against Slavery and Exploitation Act, all commercial sex involving a minor is defined as human trafficking; and

WHEREAS: The Federal Bureau of Investigation has identified San Francisco as 1 of 13 “High Intensity Child Exploitation Areas” in the country; and

WHEREAS: The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children testified before Congress that the average age of commercially sexually exploited children (CSEC) survivors is 11 to 13 for boys and 12 to 14 for girls, many of whom are recruited from middle and high schools; particularly vulnerable students are homeless, LGBTQ, unaccompanied minors, undocumented, in the foster youth system, and/or possess special education needs, and

WHEREAS: The same year, the California Welfare and Institutions Code Section 300 was amended to recognize child sex trafficking as a form of child abuse and that, therefore, sexually trafficked children fell within the jurisdiction of the child welfare system; the California Department of Social Services’ program for Commercially Sexually Exploited Children (CSEC) was established to provide funding to participating counties for training, prevention, and implementation of a CSEC protocol; and

WHEREAS: The City and County of San Francisco opted into the California Department of Social Service’s CSEC Program and the Human Services Agency Family and Children’s Services Division began to develop the city’s interagency protocol for responding to sexually trafficked youth that is expected to be completed by October 2015; and

WHEREAS: Trafficked youth often do not recognize that they are human trafficking victims due a lack of understanding or denial of exploitation; and studies have indicated that 68% of CSEC survivors suffer from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder with a documented increased risk of suicide and depression; and

WHEREAS: The US Department of Education reports that trauma from sexual exploitation impacts learning environment for CSEC survivors, often manifesting as behavioral problems due to low self-esteem, aggression, and truancy; and

WHEREAS: CSEC survivors often reject law enforcement and social services and require support and assistance from adults they trust, such as school administrators, teachers, counselors, social workers, nurses, other wellness and support staff who should therefore be trained in how to respond in a trauma-informed manner; and

WHEREAS: The California CSEC Model Interagency Protocol Framework urges educational agencies in each county to develop a mechanism for tracking CSEC as well as responding to exploited youth's educational needs, such as enrollment, truancy, and credit completion; and schools should have a clear procedure for coordinating CSEC response with other public agencies, such as the Police Department, District Attorney's Office, and Child Welfare Services; and

WHEREAS: In 2004, the Board of Education previously passed Resolution No. 45-25A16 to request that training be made available to school district staff on harassment, assault, abuse identification, and mandatory reporting; and

WHEREAS: The San Francisco Unified School District has already initiated training to staff at each of the high school Wellness Centers and student support staff pre-K – 8 on signs of and resources to address child sex trafficking and is a standing member of the Mayor's Task Force on Anti-Human Trafficking as well as the Human Services Agency Interagency CSEC Program Steering Committee; and

WHEREAS: Building on existing SFUSD initiatives to counter teen dating violence and bullying, students can play an important role in helping to identify CSEC among their peers; already, the SFUSD Student Advisory Council, composed of representatives from each of the high schools; Peer Resources; and the Wellness Center Youth Outreach Workers have demonstrated their effectiveness in reaching various groups of students.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: That the Board of Education of the San Francisco Unified School District requests that the Superintendent and district staff work with community partners to add language to the existing Child Abuse Reporting Board Policy to address human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children and enforce a mandatory reporting protocol; and
